Common information about Phoenixborn

The Phoenixborn are humans who were given power by the Phoenix to protect humanity from the Chimera. Many of their magics were previously not thought possible, and it is through this power that they are able to create creatures of their own design, called conjurations.

Most of them chose locations to guard, while others were assigned locations, during the Great Cleansing. Through their combined efforts, they eradicated the Chimera and ushered humanity into a new golden age.

They consider themselves "Children of the Phoenix," and refer to each other as siblings. Despite this, their age varies greatly, from the youngest being born a few years after the Great Cleansing to the oldest being around 600 years old and still alive. All Phoenixborn death is due to battle; a version of "a warrior's death" is attributed to them regardless of the actual circumstances of their death. They are unable to procreate.

A prophecy foretold of the conflict of the Phoenixborn, and a collection of ashes, which are the remains of the Phoenixborn who fall in conflict. Through these ashes, the victorious Phoenixborn absorb the power of their fallen foes and the last one will inherit a newborn world.

As time proceeded, the source of these warriors' power desired reunification, leading to a growing desire among the Phoenixborn to slaughter their own kind and absorb the abilities of their incinerated kin, just as the prophecy predicted. This desire has subsided after the new Red Rains and the re-emergence of the Chimera.

Aradel Summergaard

The Phoenixborn who lives in solitude in Evermist Valley, Aradel first appeared in the Master Set's The Mist Guardian and later in The Frostwild Scourge. She is also known as the Lady of the Mists, and is in her 50s or 60s.

History

Born in the Evermist Valley to Aaron Summergaard and his wife, Aradel lost her mother shortly after birth due to her mother's health issues and a complicated birth. This led her father to be a big influence in her life, and she loved and respected him; his influence can be seen on her conjurations.

During her teenage years, while she was still getting used to and learning her powers, the Great Cleansing began. During the Great Cleansing, Evermist Valley came under attack, and other Phoenixborn were being taken. Her father saved her life by intercepting a poison needle meant for her.

After the Great Cleansing, she desired silence and tranquility, and began a hermit-type lifestyle away from others. She believed the time for war and destruction was done. Her lack of presence around others caused her legendary status to grow, as some people had never seen her, even thinking she didn't exist.

She is conflicted about the current state of her world. She doesn't want to fight the other Phoenixborn; it's not who she is. She didn't want to leave, but when her home was threatened, she felt it was best to go to prevent other people from dying.

Conjurations

Aradel's three conjurations, Blue Jaguar, Butterfly Monk, and Mist Spirit are all based on the stories and legends her father told her when she was young. These creatures guard the denizens of the mists from the outside world, and heed her call en masse, knowing that when she calls, their safety is at risk.

Quotes

- "Quiet your mind. Listen to my words."
- "Be gone, interloper! This is where your trespass ends."
- "The valley itself shall rise against the foe!" + "They can smell the water within your flesh!"
- "The enemy has come. To me, my little friends!" + "Small? Yes. But as infinite as the mists themselves."
- "Heed our ancient pact and aid me now!"
- "I shall cleanse this valley of your filth."
- "Within the mists, even Truth can be reborn."
- "Can you imagine seeing one of these little Mist Spirits? Surely no one would think them dangerous. Heck, I might even try to pet it should I come across one. Then another appears, and another. Soon you're surrounded by little blue Mist Spirits. And then you notice the antlers! And what's that bit of blue above their heads? Is that blue flame? They have cut off all escape, and suddenly you hear the cry of a jaguar coming from out of the mists. You feel the vibrations and hear the low rumble of something immense coming towards you, but you can't get away!"
- "Let rock erode before water!"

Short story

They have come for you.

Aradel ignored the voice and kept walking. Her mist-kissed skin shimmered in the sunlight, and all around flitted strangely beautiful insects and the occasional fay.

Even now they hunt you. You have laid a doom upon this land.

When she arrived at her father's grave, she shook her head. She should have known this was her destination all along. And she saw him there by the gravestone, his deep blue eyes pleading with her.

I died for this land. For its people. Would you strip all meaning from my sacrifice?

"I will fight for them!" she said too loudly, her voice breaking the serenity. "Like I always have. Like you taught me."

If you stay here, the people of the Evermist will die. Each honest man who labors for his family. Every good woman who toils with her hands. All the sweet babes whose dreams have yet to take shape.

"But I cannot leave," she pleaded. "My heart is here. Would you have me tear it from my breast? Let the others come to me. I shall fight them, and I shall win."

Fight them? Yes. Win? Perhaps. But you will lose trees to flame, and the mists will be trapped by dust and ash. The digging of graves is the only prize you can hope to win by staying in this place.

The mists glowed blue, and from out of them emerged a spirit. It rolled lazily through the air, cooing in the strange tongue of its kind. Aradel smiled as it floated by her, and she held out a finger for it to touch. The mist spirit turned and looked at her, its eyes sad and knowing.

"If I leave this place," she whispered to it, "how long will it be before I can return?" And when Aradel heard the spirit coo the answer, she wept.

Astrea

The self-appointed Goddess of Ishra, little is known about Astrea. She appears in the similarly named deck, The Goddess of Ishra. She reappears in The Blight of Neverset.

History

Again, not much is known about Astrea. She uses her magic to control minds, with examples of that being Echo Greystorm's allies, Light and Sonic Swordsmen.

She arrived at Neverset to aid with destroying the Blight that appeared there.

Conjurations

Astrea has 3 conjurations: Steadfast Guardian, Light Bringer, and Weeping Spirit. As of Blight of Neverset, she has added two more to her repertoire: Shimmer Wing and Eternity Flame.

Brennen Blackcloud

The guardian of the city of Blackcloud,

Brennen Blackcloud first appeared in Children of Blackcloud, and later appeared as one of the four Phoenixborn in The Corpse of Viros.

Brennen Blackcloud
Dragonborn Blackcloud, unknown

Card from Children of Blackcloud

History

Brennen Blackcloud was born a girl, but their grandfather, through following Blackcloud's old-school tradition, made them live and act as a man to follow the throne. Brennen's relationship with their grandfather was anything but simple; while he was their only confidant, they also resented the manipulation. They also held some guilt regarding their female identity. Just as they started to think about the throne, how they felt about it, and how they wanted to represent themselves, their grandfather, known as the "Never Dying King"^[1], passed away and Brennen inherited the kingdom. On top of that, the Collection of Ashes was beginning, creating more conflict in their life.

At 15, they are the last scion of the falling House of Blackcloud, and they aim to restore their family and the city to the terrifying glory of their ancient heritage.

Conjurations

Brennen has only 1 conjunction associated with them: Dread Wraith. Even in the Corpse of Viros, none of the conjurations are tied specifically with them. This lone conjunction is a creation born from the anger and trauma due to the relationship Brennen had with their grandfather.

Pronouns

Brennen's pronouns are a complex issue; on the one hand, we, as readers about the fictional world, know that Brennen was born a girl. However, almost all residents of Argaia believe Brennen to be a young man. More confusion is added if you consider how both of those are tied to past trauma, and both may be appropriate and also inappropriate simultaneously, but neither are wrong. Shortly after the release of The Corpse of Viros, the designer said (in Discord) that Brennen's character story does not have a particular ending in sight, and the original creator of Brennen also did not have one determined. The community's consensus is that any pronouns are acceptable, with most preferring to use "she/her" or "they/them."

- Fester
- Safeguard
- Guilt Link

- “Render unto me, all that I desire most.”
- “Even now I fester within the hearts of your friends.”
- “And just like that, your efforts are for naught.”
- “Ideas breed disloyalty and words are their foul seed.”
- “The Chimera will find we are an eager adversary.”

Coal Roarkwin

The Lord of Iron, Coal is the Phoenixborn of Rustwatch.

He is 514, born during the second century of the Sealed Age. He first appears in the Master Set's The Men of Iron and later in The Corpse of Viros.

Coal Roarkwin

Alternate art

His earliest memories were of roaming the streets with other parentless children, swinging sticks as though they were swords in the hands of the world's greatest heroes. The danger of regular Chimera attacks made him grow up quickly and by his thirteenth year, he found a job on the famous Captain Gerald Bywater's ship, the Crusty Heel. Five years flew by on the deck of the old ship, filled with ocean-dwelling chimera, fallen comrades, and promotions as his power, not fully understood, grew.

Before long, his skills caught the attention of the Vermillion Council. They recruited him to join the ranks of the fearless Amurai, training him. He excelled at formal training, learning discipline, surpassing his strength, and discovering that he was more than just a man.

He was a Phoenixborn.

He relished his duty as an Amurai and it took him to the darkened corners of the world where the Chimera were deadliest. This eventually brought him to the shores of Rustwatch, where, in the midst of all the fighting, he found Lyn. Their love for each other blossomed more fiercely than any fighting he had ever experienced, and he quit the Amurai, dedicating himself to her. Decades passed, old age seizing Lyn like it never could a Phoenixborn. It was in her last breath that she whispered to him, "Save them."

Coal joined the Great Cleansing, destroying leagues of Chimera as his heart ached. Rustwatch came to peace shortly after and there he stayed, enjoying the calm, until the Collection of Ashes called him back to fight.

After the new wave of Red Rains fell, Coal joined several other Phoenixborn as an Adjudicator for the trial of Rowan Umberend^[1].

Conjurations

Coal's lone conjuration is the Iron Rhino.

- Lesson 4: Give your units shiny armor. Make sure it has spiky bits... because who doesn't love spiky bits!

Short story

Coal laid the boy's body on the cold cobblestones, and, drawing his hand down the child's face, closed his eyes. An explosion shook the streets as a flaming arrow flew through the window of a bakery, its fire igniting the flour particles that hung heavy in the air. Coal stood, his face dour, as all around him weapons clashed, people screamed, and buildings burned.

This is Rustwatch. This was my love's home.

The anger inside him boiled over and he bellowed in rage. As if in response, a Rayward knight appeared, and spotting Coal, spurred his horse forward. Coal gave a cry, spittle flying from his lips, and he drew a cutlass that he threw at his foe. His magic launched the blade forward at a blinding speed, and it slammed into the mounted rider. A gurgling sound came from the knight's helmet as the blade punched through his steel plate, and he flew backward to the ground.

I have killed before. But those were monsters. Those were chimera.

Two more assailants came at him on foot, but Coal spun away and lashed out with two more of his blades. One fell to the ground dead. The other fell screaming, hands futilely clutching at the stump of a leg. Coal granted the soldier mercy and the screaming stopped.

Another dead boy. All of this for the mad desires of one person.

And suddenly she was there. Her armor was immaculately clean and she wore a smirk upon her face. "Hello, Coal."

"Dimona," he spat. He raised his arms, and the multitude of blades he wore upon his jerkin whipped free, beginning to spin around him. "All of this pointless death!"

"And yet there is only one death I actually require," she said. "Yours."

Dimona Odinstar

The Radiant Queen of

Rayward, Dimona

Odinstar commands the Rayward army. In Ashes: Rise of the Phoenixborn, she was a promotional Phoenixborn, but in Ashes Reborn, she is the Phoenixborn of The Queen of Lightning deck. She has returned in The Siege of Lordswall.

Dimona Odinstar from The Queen of Lightning

Art from The Queen of Lightning

History

Little is known about Dimona before the Collection of Ashes. What is known is that she used the Library of Mariendretta to research old wars, the ones held between humans and not the recent conflicts of humanity against the Chimera. There, she learned military strategy and tactics from the histories. Unlike some of the other Phoenixborn, Dimona was more than willing to involve others in the Collection.

To aid in winning, she has sent scouts around the world to gather information and spy on Phoenixborn, so that she may learn who next to strike against. She is known to be cold and ruthless behind her pristine holy look.

Conjurations

Dimona is one of the Phoenixborn with an exclusive conjuration: Empyrean Mount. Resembling a pegasus, this mount is reserved for her soldiers who have distinguished themselves in battle.

Her other conjuration is the Cloudburst Gryphon, presumably created as a result of the heraldry she found in her studies.

She has most recently created a dragon to ride into battle at the Siege of Lordswall.

Card appearances

- Fork Lightning
- Take to the Skies
- Divinity Mount
- At the Gates (Siege of Lordswall Horde aspect)

Quotes:

- “Bow before the unyielding clarity of the light!”
- “I point and they will see it dead.”
- “Tremble! For there is no light without me!”
- “We shall see how your forces fare against mine” + “My fury made manifest.”
- “This plague shall not mock my laws, my order!”
- “We yet control the skies. Let us break the siege from above!”
- “My righteousness shall sear a path through the horde.”

Short story

She sat upon her destrier and scowled at the resplendent battle-line that stretched out before her. Dimona wondered if they knew her secrets. Her stomach was a churning ocean of sick. She had never killed another human before, much less waged war against a whole city. She was making everything up as she went. Oh, there had been meticulous planning, but how could one make plans when everything one knew was hypothetical?

But Dimona had crafted schemes nonetheless. She knew her former brothers and sisters would adopt the same fighting styles they had against the Chimera, so Dimona sought out the fabled Library of Mariendretta. In those hallowed and haunted halls she researched the wars of the ancients, learned about formations and maneuvers, and studied the notes long-dead generals had made about the uses of terrain. And yet, despite months of preparation, here she sat, scared once again, just as if she was still that little girl hiding under her bed from monsters.

Enough. She had never been one for self-indulgent reflection, and she would be damned if she would start there in the fields outside of Rustwatch. Dimona reared up on her warhorse and turned to address the soldiers who had pledged their lives to fighting for her cause.

“The world already tried to wipe our precious Rayward from its face,” she yelled. “But we refused to be swept aside. Now night falls once again, but this time Rayward shall be the light that shows the way! Shall we sit back as humanity descends into barbarism? Shall we allow our kin to remain squatting within their little cities, shunning the great wide world? No my brothers and sisters! The great reclamation of the world is at hand, and it is Rayward that will unite our kind and usher them into a new age of civilization. They shall see our glorious example and join us, or like Rustwatch, we will lead them by the sword to salvation. And when the world awakens from its slumber, it shall see stalwart Rayward standing tall, not just as one city, but as a multitude, all saying, here we are! Now and forever!”

“Now and forever!” her army roared back. “Now and forever!”

Echo Greystorm

History

Little is known about Echo, though Astrea Marked two of his allies, the Light and Sonic Swordsmen, and turned them against him.

He also had a rivalry with Jericho Kill, though it is likely that rivalry is mutual, or even persists, after Jericho's use of time magic.

Conjurations

Echo's only creature conjuration is the Mirror Spirit, which carries a fake black hole on it's back.

He does provide some of his allies with Enhanced Strength, though that is not a direct conjuration of his magic.

Lurking in Darmas is the Phoenixborn Harold Westraven. He appears in The Demons of Darmas. There are hints he may have changed himself to be a vampire or a werewolf.

Harold Westraven

Art from The Demons of Darmas

The Phoenixborn define their own existence, and this is especially true of Harold Westraven. Harold has embraced the city of Darmas' legends, and for no other reason than it gives him delight, has used his power to make these horrors a reality. The people of Darmas lock their doors well before the sun sets, and cower in their homes as strange noises echo in the streets. Woe to the weary traveler who finds herself caught outdoors, when the howls of wolves sound from the alleyways, and the squeaking of bats erupts from dark cellars.

-Text from PHG's release announcement

History

The announcement contains almost all of what is known of Harold.

Conjurations

Like most ceremonial users, Harold has only a single conjuration: Vampire Bat Swarm. These are based in the legends of Darmas mentioned above.

His other conjuration, the Hunter's Mark, is likely a callback to the marking and stalking of prey that vampires and werewolves are known for.

History

Hope appears to have been good enough friends with Victoria Glassfire to have exchanged presents with her; for her, a lantern, for them, the necklace they still wear. While there is nothing confirmed about what happened between the two of them, it is likely this exchange was meant as a memento due to an impending separation.

Conjurations

Hope's two conjurations are both spirits: the dual-tailed Fox Spirit and the brightly colored Wishing Wing.

In the Spawn of Shadowreck, Hope reveals another conjuration they have created: the mouse-like Scrawler.

Pronouns

Hope is non-binary, and has chosen to use "they/them" as their pronouns.

Abylon, Jericho

Whitepetal is the winner of the first Collection of Ashes. She appeared in the now-retired legacy deck, The Path of Assassins, and was later released as the first Phoenixborn in the Time cycle, Jericho Reborn, with the new deck The Breaker of Fate.

History

Jericho was born into slavery, and trained in violence at a young age. Directed by her mother, she killed all of the Pirate Kings in Abylon. Some time later, she killed the Last Dragon. Her path of killing lead to her ruling over Abylon as The Assassin Queen, using its people as weapons.

She was the eventual winner of the first Collection of Ashes, rising to godhood with the re-unification of the Phoenix's powers. However, there, she learned of the feeling of guilt, and destroyed the Phoenix, fracturing time with her actions. This change in the timeline has caused most of the Phoenixborn to be returned to life as though they had never died, but some were not revived, and not all of the timeline was reset.

No one in Argaia remembers her as Jericho Kill now, except The Final Pythia. Her monikers also now include "of the Forfeited Throne," but she remains an isolated Phoenixborn.

Prior to the Red Rains, but after the Collection had started, she was seen venturing to Gorrenrock and nearby New Gobi. This stands out as strange as it was peaceful, but also because she has rarely left her home since rebirth^[1].

She was also conspicuous in her absence as Rowan Umberend was conducting his research on the Chimera and Red Rains beneath Abylon.

Conjurations

Jericho's two conjurations evoke imagery of speed - the slow Turtle Guard, and the faster Time Hopper.

Card appearances

- Foresight

- Stasis
- Accelerate
- Blink
- Outmatch

Quotes:

- “There is yet time for us to change.”
- “You exist, yes, but when?”
- “This timeline requires adjustment.”
- “Your déjà vu is another time’s echo.”

Official texts

Born in bonds, nursed on hatred, honed to kill. Like an assassin's arrow, from her mother's bow, Jericho flew. She stalked and killed each of her mother's slavers, and when the last Pirate King fell, she despaired. Today, Jericho Kill sits on the throne of Abylon. She has now become the wielder, and her people are her weapons.

-The Path of Assassins packaging

Once she was known as Jericho Kill. Warlord. Assassin. Monster. But upon ascending the throne of God, Jericho was crushed with a feeling altogether alien to her - guilt. Reeling from the horrors she had caused, Jericho wielded her new power and tore asunder the heart of the Phoenix. Time has been broken and reset, and Jericho cast from the realms beyond. Can she change all that she previously wrought, or will she succumb to madness once more?

-The Breaker of Fate packaging

No one remembers the violent mercenary who called herself Jericho Kill. Indeed, it is as if she never existed. In the place of that ruthless killer is a new Jericho, one who knows mercy, self control, and who can tap into a previously unknown source of power. What has happened? For the common folk of Argaia, guessing at the motives of the Phoenixborn is an old and popular sport...

History

Jessa took over the Bloodwoods Clan by killing Maggada, a Chimera that had been ruling the Clan. Jessa maintains complete control over the clan, dictating life, death, and revival of its members, making these choices to further her plans to claim control of everything.

Short story

The throne was hers now. Jessa giggled as she climbed atop it and settled into its polished seat. She looked off to her right, her eyes focusing on something distant and unseen, and she cackled at some joke that went unheard by the others. Those of the Bloodwoods Clan that were present looked at each other questioningly. But then they looked back at the smoking, squelching corpse, its eight enormous legs twitching in the air. That had been their queen. Maggada had ruled the Bloodwoods Clan for as long as anyone could remember. The outside world would have called her Chimera, but to the people of the woods, the spider thing with the three human faces was their queen, their goddess, and their eternal tormentor.

“My king!” shouted Jessa. “Bring me my king!” An eyeless and tongueless woman ran up to the throne and handed the Phoenixborn the straw doll dressed up like royalty. The pitiful creature grunted excitedly before bowing away in a hurry. “King Strawbaby,” Jessa cooed. “Do you see it? All this is ours,” and she gestured wildly at the dark gloom that enveloped them. “These people are ours now. So much flesh. So many plans.”

“Jessa!” shouted a warrior.

“Queen Jessa” she corrected him.

“Perhaps,” he sneered. “Do you think we shall follow you simply because you cast down Maggada?”

“No,” she said softly. “You will follow me out of fear.” And the warrior made a whimpering noise. He looked around in confusion before staggering backward.

“What are you doing witch?” he gasped. Jessa opened her mouth, and from out of it dribbled dark rivulets of blood. The warrior gave a wheezing cry and flailed his arms, his limbs contorting, his skin turning pale and pulling tightly over his bones. The flow of blood that came from Jessa's mouth grew stronger, gushing forth in a crimson vomit. The warrior's exsanguinated corpse hit the ground. The blood trickled to a stop, and Jessa grinned as she wiped her lips with the back of a hand.

“Jessa!” came the cries of her clan. “Queen Jessa!”

years old. She first appears in the Master Set's The Snakes in Silver, and has journeyed to Neverset to fight in The Blight of Neverset.

History

Maeoni was born in Silverwood. Her childhood was modest but had to sell jewelry of twisted silver on the streets of the Goldleaf district to stay safe.

Alternate art

Then, everything changed when the Chimera breached the Outer Walls. Maeoni spent many years fending off the chaos of blood and fire, surviving. When the chimera reached the Inner Wall, she answered the cries of her fellow citizens, leading Silverwood's charge in the Great Cleansing.

When the great war ended, Silverwood made her their queen. She is known for reigning over her citizens wisely, giving them many peaceful years. Now with the prophecy birthing the Collection of Ashes, she waits in her beloved home, loathing the fighting that will come. Yet ready to again do what she must.

Felix Galeforce is one such Phoenixborn who attempted to claim her powers, but failed. While Maeoni is known to have been the first Phoenixborn to have killed another Phoenixborn during the Collection, it is not known if Felix was that Phoenixborn.

Also, at some point after the Collection had started, but before the new Red Rains, she and Rin Northfell shared a lunch date at her palace, but he fled that night, before either of them could be consumed by the desire to kill one another.

Following the arrival of the new Red Rains, Maeoni was one of several Phoenixborn to be an Adjudicator in Rowan Umberend's trial^[1].

She has most recently set off to Neverset, to fight the Blight that has appeared there, and in doing so, has reunited with Rin.

Conjurations

Maeoni's two conjurations are the Silver Snake, and the guardian Gilder. It is suspected that she is responsible for the Bastion Badger, though it may also have had influences from other Phoenixborn.

Card appearances

- Empower
- Open Memories

- Embrace
- Venom Strike
- Proliferate (Blight of Neverset Bloom aspect)
- Sowing Strike (Blight of Neverset Bloom aspect)

- "The children of the new world rally to me." + "They safeguard a power beyond any of us."
- "No."
- "If gold is what you desire..."
- "I have spent a lifetime preparing for this moment."
- "I shall slay you in this world so you do not find purchase in the next."
- "Can we delay the inevitable for but a moment longer?"

Short story

Dust clouds swirled through the damaged plaza in howling gusts, but Maeoni hung over nothingness, her clothes and hair as still as the air in a sealed room.

"Felix!" she cried, her voice deep and terrible. "My war ended forty years ago. Begone from my sight! Begone from my city! And only then might you survive this." Her opponent staggered backward in terror, but the young Phoenixborn's eyes were defiant. He gesticulated wildly, and brought forth another colossus.

"Kill her!" Felix screamed. "Smash her! Wipe her from the face of this world!" Maeoni merely waved an arm. There was a great cracking noise, the smell of ozone, and the colossus exploded into fiery chunks.

"Wipe me from the face of this world?" she yelled in rage. "I who have existed in this world and the next? So be it, Galeforce."

From out of the smoking depths of the plaza arose her silver snakes. Only now Felix saw that they had grown, made monstrous by the power of their mistress.

And he gave one last scream^[2].

Footnotes

2: Isaac said Maeoni is the first Phoenixborn to kill another one. This might be it.

Noah Redmoon

Noah Redmoon is the last survivor of the Redmoon siblings, and the ruler of the ruined city of Viros. Called the Master of Shadows, he lived in an illusionary world until the Red Rains pulled forth a dragonic Chimera in his city. He first appeared in the Master Set's The Shadows of Viros, and later in The Corpse of Viros.

Noah Redmoon type unknown
Art from The Shadows of Viros

Alternate art

During the Great Cleansing, Noah was one of the Phoenixborn who traveled the most, but he was also pulled in many different directions; he was expected to meet the wants and needs of the ruling Vermillion Council, the city of Viros, and others in the world. As a traveling Phoenixborn, he was at their beck and call.

It is unclear, but it is possible it was during this time when his siblings were killed. A Chimera tasked with killing them attacked the three of them, and during the fight, a second Chimera arrived, and split the trio. This resulted in Astor and Moses dying, and the Chimera leaving. The Chimera has not been seen since.

When Noah returned to Viros, the city council decided that his two siblings would be better rulers. Furious at this denial of what he felt was rightfully his, he created an enormous illusion of destruction on an apocalyptical level, but underneath that illusion, he tore the city apart piece by piece over time.

Following the wiping of Viros from the map, Noah decided to save a group of children, adopting and raising them as his own. They became the Stormwind Snipers, and are his loyal guards and fighters. But the new city, those children's families, and their own children, are all an illusion; an imaginary world created by Noah.

During this time, he was thought to be dead, when in fact, he was living in a world of his own creation.

Noah Redmoon desires nothing less than to be the figure of destiny in the prophecy of Collection. He considers those who resist the reunification to be weaker souls that prove his own right to power. By striking down his weaker brethren before they even know they are in peril, he saves them from the pain of anticipating their doom, yet some realize their fate before the end comes.

His plans may go awry, however, as the Corpse of Viros has emerged from his own feelings. His illusion of the bustling city of Viros is no longer constant, as the Chimera can cause it to fade in and out of reality, exposing the ruined city beneath it.

He was most recently seen among the Phoenixborn in Shadowreck, slaying the Chimera that emerged from there.^[1]

Conjurations

Noah is one of the few Phoenixborn with a signature conjuration: the Masked Wolves. He also can summon forth the illusionary False Demon.

Card appearances

- Resummon
- Small Sacrifice
- Sleight of Hand
- Shadow Strike
- Summon Calamity Golem
- Shadowblade
- Lurk (Corpse of Viros Shadow aspect)

Quotes

- “Your every success furthers my purposes.”
- “You’re deceived. Nothing in this world is worth saving.”
- “When they kill you, you will not see them.” + “Look past reality. You’ll see my wolves stalking you.”
- “You’ll know they’re here when the bolt hits your head.”
- “Even my schemes have schemes.”
- “And still you try to fathom what I am about.”
- “To die is not enough. You shall cease to have ever been.”
- “It is nothing at all, yet it is everything you fear.”
- “The Chimera should have left me to my squalor.”

Short story

“You can take off the mask,” gasped the Lord Mayor as he lay at the base of the stairs leading up to the prytaneum. His right leg was bent at a grotesque angle, and the older man's breathing was heavy and uneven. “Is this what you wanted, Redmoon? Viros burns. This city that held you in esteem. Did you save us from the chimeras solely so you could be the one to light the match?”

His masked adversary chuckled as he came down the stairs, each step slow and deliberate. Wolves howled in the night, and screams echoed from every street and alleyway. The great Clocktower of the Sun burned, casting light over the city like some obscene candle from hell.

Noah Redmoon pulled the mask from his face. "Do you pretend to know what I want, human?" He held his sword over the prostrate mayor, and let the weight of the blade settle into the man's midsection. If the Lord Mayor felt pain, he refused to show it. "I never wanted more than your love. Yet since I was boy, no one wanted anything from me other than the weapon that flows through my veins. Your kind has stripped away everything I am, and now you wag your tongue in anger at discovering only the weapon remains." Noah pressed down on the sword, and the mayor screamed. The man's hands tried to hold the blade by its sides, but Noah pushed down further.

From down the street, a common woman shrieked in terror, and the gnashing snarls of a wolf rang out in response. The woman screamed, the wolf growled, and soon her voice was cut off in a hideous, wet instant. Noah grinned at this and leaned down to the mayor's face.

"Please," gasped the mayor. His hands were slick with his own blood, and it began to trickle from the corners of his mouth. He mouthed more words, but only a sickly, rattley noise emerged. Noah smiled and pulled the blade from the man's belly.

"You plead to me like the sheep pleads to the lion," Noah sneered. Growling wolves emerged from the darkness. "Eat," he said to them. "For I have had my fill."

Now Taya quietly slid countless treasures into her bag, and considered that if she hurried, she would still be able to take the next ship out of Shadowreck before anyone discovered what had happened. But as she lifted a silver statuette from a squat serving table, she felt it grow cold, and a slight rime grew over its surface. She dropped it, then suddenly realized she could see her own breath. Turning, Taya saw she was not alone. The chamber was filled with the dead, all of them armed, and there, among their number, Taya saw herself.

“Your death has been ordained by powers you cannot comprehend,” said the Phoenixborn from her seat, her gaze still vacant. “So much so that your soul already dwells with the dead.”

Taya screamed.

History

Rin was a Phoenixborn who enjoyed the powers bestowed upon him.

In 2005, he visited Silverwood, and met Maeoni Viper. They had a date at her palace, and that night, Rin dreamed of them embracing passionately, then it turned violent and he consumed her ashes. - “Cold beats ugly every time!”

Short story

I remember when I first heard Alibrimbor's prophecy. I was drunk in a Gorrenrock brothel, and when I heard those fateful words, I laughed and threw my cup at the messenger who was interrupting my fun. The notion that my blessing could be my doom seemed so absurd, but perhaps if I had been sober I would have thought about how my dreams had started to turn strange. Perhaps then I would not have been so quick to scoff. But I have never been one to dwell overlong on serious matters.

Later in the fifth year of two thousand, I was a passenger on a boat that took port in Silverwood, and there I met Maeoni Viper. How could I land in that city and not seek out the Viper? Arranging a meeting was more difficult than I expected – she had little interest in seeing me. When I finally saw her, and heard those first words fall from her mouth, I was immediately overwhelmed by the tremendous presence the woman possessed. I fell in love with her then and there, though I'll admit falling in love has never been too difficult for me. We shared an awkward lunch on a patio outside her home. She was all formal pleasantries, and I played the bumbling, fawning fool. Me! But such was my unexpected love for her that I could bring none of my charms to bear.

That night I retired to a room her servants prepared for me. I had no interest in exploring the city's nightlife. I lay in bed and fell asleep thinking of her exquisite face.

But I did not sleep easy.

In my dream our bodies were entangled in a lover's embrace, my mouth tasting hers, and my dream self had lost all his awkwardness, and she was good and truly mine. But the dream changed in that way dreams do, the shift coming so subtly that it is impossible to identify, and suddenly we were not entwined in love, but in murderous violence. She screamed as I dug my clawed hands into her flesh, and from out of her burst fire. The flames licked my body, but they did not scorch or burn, but filled me with euphoria, and I tore her asunder like a dog rooting for a buried bone. Her wailing reached a terrible pitch and the fire consumed the last of her. I sucked my breath in with a mighty huff, and the fires filled my lungs. Maeoni was naught but hot ashes, and these I rubbed into my flesh with manic glee.

I awoke in tears and sweat, and instantly recalled Alibrimbor's prophecy. Suddenly my youthful frolics seemed so pointless. The future did not seem so sweet.

That night I fled Silverwood in shame. I made my way back to Frostfell^[1] and let the stinging cold there freeze away my feelings. And while I found some solace, the cold could not keep the dreams from coming. I have not always been a good man, but I have striven, in my own way, to do good. But now I see that such concerns are for mortals. For the children of the Phoenix there can be no peace, no solace. These people were my brothers and sisters. I have fought by their sides. I have loved them. But gods save me, I see what is coming, and so help me, I am going to kill them all.

Rowan Umberend

"If my expulsion from the Vermillion Council has provided benefit, it is that I am never again required to share space with Rowan Umberend."

Rowan Umberend
Image and card type unknown
Art from The Scholar of Ruin

A member of the Vemillion Council until his expulsion for Blasphemy, Rowan of the Abylon Outskirts seeks to become the most powerful Phoenixborn. As his status of Phoenixborn was a secret, he had no area to protect. He is a new Phoenixborn for Ashes Reborn, and appeared with The Scholar of Ruin deck.

History

Rowan was a member of the Vermillion Council, a secretive organization dedicated to studying the Phoenixborn, though he kept his status as a Phoenixborn hidden from them.

This gave him several allies whose knowledge he could exploit with his time and ceremonial magics, accelerating his own research into the physical and temporal ruins of Abylon's battle sites. There, he found the Red Raindrops, ancient and dark artifacts that could call forth the Red Rains.

His success has earned him hatred and expulsion from the Council, as well as disdain from his fellow Phoenixborn. He is correctly blamed for the return of the Red Rains, and bears a price on his head placed by Elga Trilling.

He does not see himself as a villain, rather, non-Phoenixborn are of little value in his eyes.^[1] Even during his trial, he showed no remorse at his actions.

Conjurations

For a ceremonial Phoenixborn, Rowan boasts many conjurations. His Eroding slows enemies, and his Ruin Dwellers are dangerous, left alone or attacked.

His reputation comes from his other two conjurations, the Red Raindrops, and the Reborn Chimera. Reanimating a certain other Phoenixborn's former ally, this verion is the first of its kind, but it is still considered "kind of a botched abomination."^[2]

Little is known, or, perhaps, allowed to be remembered, of Saria. Those who support the arts, and all others are dead to her. Possibly literally.

Short story

The viola's haunting melody carefully lay beneath the volume of the party's many conversations. Glasses clinked, the occasional fork scraped across a plate, and here and there noble ladies threw back their heads and laughed at the jests of their gentleman companions. She strolled through the lavishly furnished manor, guests turn to her with hypnotic fascination as she entered each room.

“Saria, darling,” cooed one moneyed widow. “You must have your cook share their recipe for this devil's punch. The spices are Olympian, are they not?” A handful of other guests stood there in the drawing room, anticipating the response, their eyes glazed and vacant.

“Well done Lady Mennan,” whispered Saria with a smile. “The spices are indeed from Olympus. I'll make sure your man has the recipe before you leave.” There were nods of approval, and one dandy even clapped at Lady Mennan's guess. A servant sidled up behind Saria and whispered in her ear. “How many ships?” she asked him.

“Three,” responded the thin man. Saria walked to the enormous window that looked out over the Bone Sea. She waited as the Guideman light house passed its yellow gaze over the dark waters, and there! Three large ships crept toward the cliffs on which Guideman Manor rested.

Saria raised her hands, and suddenly there were two enormous seaside ravens upon the lighthouse where previously there had been none. She casually waved a hand, and the two birds descended upon the ships.

“Oh gods!” cried a man as panic seized the room. “Attackers! Call for our carriage at once!” But Saria turned back to her guests and smiled. She exhaled gently and suddenly the room was calm once more. A single line of blood ran from the nose of Lady Mennan, though she gave no sign she noticed.

“Come,” said Saria. “Who wants to join me in the hall for games of chance?” They all professed their excitement at this. And outside, on the dark waves of the sea, men went screaming to their deaths.

Sembali Grimtongue

Even for Phoenixborn, Sembali of Memoria is unusual: her original abilities in Rise of the Phoenixborn were determined through a player participation event called the War Within, in which she was the main protagonist. While her light side was the victor there, Ashes Reborn saw her ability changed to an entirely new one. She appears as the Phoenixborn in The Spirits of Memoria, and returns for The Spawn of Shadowreck.

Art from The Spirits of Memoria

History

"Two paths lie before you. One cloaked in shadow, another basked in light. Which will you choose?"

For years Sembali pored over the ancient holy tomes within Memoria's walls, and it was deep within the darkened halls of the cloistered libraries that she discovered a secret that made her question all she knew about not only her fellow Phoenixborn, but the Gods themselves. In the wake of this discovery, Sembali was forced to choose which path she would now follow: would she continue to use her Phoenixborn abilities to safeguard the faithful of Argaia or would she instead embark on a path of conquest to take her rightful place as the Phoenixborn supreme? In the end, she chose the path basked in light.

Sembali Grimtongue is the leader of the Gatekeepers, a death cult whose rituals are celebratory in nature. Her worshippers bring the corpses of their loved ones to the city's many temples, so that she, the priestesses of the cult, can guide the souls of the departed to their loved ones in the world beyond.

This guidance has taken a toll on her, as the dead whisper of calamities to come. She has taken refuge in illusion magics, but she might be going too far, and runs the risk of losing herself in them.

Conjurations

Sembali has but 2 conjurations: the Admonishers, and the solitary Spectral Assassin.

In the Spawn of Shadowreck, she reveals a darker creation: the Shade Prowler.

Guarding Erris Isle, Tristan communes with the life of every being in the ocean. He is a new Phoenixborn, introduced for Ashes Reborn in The Ocean's Guard.

History

A solitary Phoenixborn, less is known about him than many others. There are hints that he might not be human.

Conjurations

Tristan has created a large number of conjurations, all a part of sea life. The small Prism Tetras can combine into a larger Radiant Leviathan, and disassemble back. He has also made Tidal Crabs, and Seafoam Snappers.

Victoria Glassfire
Mythical Glassfire type unknown
Art from Duchess of Deception dwells in Smogborough. She first appeared in The Duchess of Deception, but has traveled to fight The Spawn of Shadowreck.

History

Her past is almost certainly hard to discover, as Leo Sunshadow could not remember her memories, though no one knows why. One of the memories previously revealed was her relationship with Hope Everthorn, from whom she got her signature lantern. However, the events of the fight at Shadowreck have made it clear she still has some fond memories of their time together.

She is not considered sane.

After the defeat of the Spawn of Shadowreck, she stayed for a week to let them celebrate her (and the other Phoenixborn) for the defeat of that Chimera.

Conjurations

Victoria's ghostly conjurations are the generally cute Shadow Spirit and the nauseatingly malformed Shadow Hound.
